Treatment of Pneumonia

Cattle with pneumonia are dull, have a reduced appetite and a fever, they may also have discharge from their eyes and nose, a cough and rapid or noisy breathing. A high rectal temperature (fever) is often the first sign to appear and is strongly associated with pneumonia – pneumonia nearly always causes a high temperature. Where an outbreak of pneumonia is seen in a group of calves, checking their temperatures is the most reliable way of determining how many are affected.

Speak to a vet for advice on any queries you might have on pneumonia or a vaccine program.
